TAPA MARTINTHI YALA Shared Use Path

Opening second section and connection to the new Port River Bikeway

The second section of the Tapa Martinthi Yala Shared Use Path (SUP) which runs alongside the Northern Connector motorway, between the Bolivar and Southern Interchanges, will open on Sunday, 17 May, connecting and also opening the new Port River Bikeway. This compliments the first section of the Tapa Martinthi Yala which opened between the Northern and Bolivar Interchanges last month.

The name of the path is Tapa Martinthi Yala, meaning "pathway to embrace today" in the Aboriginal Kaurna language and has been delivered as part of the Northern Connector Project. This path will connect into the new Port River Bikeway and the Gawler Greenway at The Northern Connector's Southern Interchange, creating approximately 43km of continuous paths from Gawler to Port Adelaide.

The Port River Bikeway is another new section of SUP being delivered as part of the Northern Connector Project. It runs adjacent PREXY connecting into the Port Adelaide cycle network at Perkins Drive.

Once complete the Tapa Martinthi Yala will also connect to the Gawler Greenway, providing easy access to Adelaide's CBD. It is expected that this connection will be completed in the coming weeks.

People walking and cycling are encouraged to familiarise themselves with the below map and take care at the dedicated pedestrian crossings. You can also plan your bike ride on these new cycling facilities on the Cycle Instead Journey Planner cycleinstead.com.au.

Please note that cycling or walking on the Northern Connector motorway is prohibited.
